Nor a particle of calomel or any other deleterious substance enters into the composition of Ayer's Cathartic Pills. On the contrary, they prove of special service to those who have used calomel and other mineral poisons as medicines, and feel their injurious effects. In such cases Ayer's Pills are invaluable.

Another Shooting Affray Which Results in the Wounding of Two of the Participants.

Robert Lewis Ross, the Shooter, in Custody—The Particulars.

This city was the scene of another shooting affray yesterday which, in all probability, will result in the death of one of the participants. The parties concerned in the affair were Henry Schlitz, Joe Archdeacon and Robert Lewis Ross. Ross is a colored fellow, of medium size, about twenty-two years old and lives at Helena Station on the Kentucky Central. He says he makes his home at J. R. King's, one of the farmers in that vicinity. Schlitz is a son of George Schlitz, and Archdeacon is a son of Con Archdeacon, of this city. Both of the young men are about the same age as Ross, who did the shooting. Schlitz is as tall as Ross, but not so heavy, while Archdeacon is much smaller. The shooting occurred early yesterday morning—between 5 and 6 o'clock—near Moore's grocery on the Fleming pike, within the city limits, and resulted in the wounding of both Schlitz and Archdeacon. Schlitz was shot in the small of the back, the ball—a 38 calibre—entering near the spinal column. The wound caused a partial paralysis of the right limb, and is pronounced almost necessarily fatal. The wound was probed, but the ball was not found. It lodged somewhere in the region of the abdomen, but no attempt has been made to extract it. Immediately after the shooting, Schlitz was carried into a house near by. He told the people, who had gathered, that he was "done for" this time, and asked some one to go for his folks. Drs. Phister and Strode were summoned and did what they could to relieve his suffering. He was afterwards brought to his home at the southeast corner of Limestone and Fourth. There was but very little change in his condition during the day. He expressed the opinion to several callers that his wound would prove fatal. He rested well last night, however, and was better this morning.

Archdeacon's wound is apparently only a slight one. The ball entered the fleshy part of the right limb, a few inches below the knee, on the outward part and a little to the front, and passed through, ranging backward and slightly downward. He was sitting up when seen yesterday, and did not suffer much pain, except when he attempted to move the wounded limb. He was shot in the same limb in April, 1884, during the affray near Owens, Parker & Co.'s elevator, in which a fellow named Alex. Snitz, from Cabin Creek, received his death wound. His wound at that time was not very serious, the ball passing through the fleshy part of the leg, about twelve inches above the knee.

After the shooting, Ross went to his sister's home near by, and then came to the station house, and surrendered to Marshal James Hefflin. He had his pistol in his hand when he surrendered. He was placed in the "cage," where he was afterwards seen by a representative of the BULLETIN. He said he had known Schlitz for some time, both of them having run on the river on the same steamer. He had no acquaintance with Archdeacon. He stayed in this city Saturday night and was on his way home. He claimed that he didn't see Schlitz and Archdeacon until they made some remark to him. He was looking at one of Frank Devine's tickets he said, and was walking along mumbling something to himself. He replied to the remark made by the two, and then one word brought on another, until at last the two jumped off the fence. He didn't remember much that took place after that. He "knew he shot the two fellows." He said he was "sorry it had happened," but he "guessed that it wouldn't do him any good now."

Schlitz and Archdeacon were afterwards seen. Their account of the affair did not differ materially. They had spent the night out along the railroad some where. They had a keg of beer, and when they started in town for breakfast they filled up some bottles and brought along with them. They were sitting on the fence where the shooting occurred when Ross came along. Archdeacon had been taking a drink from the bottle, and Ross made some remark as he came up. Archdeacon replied "that was all right, the beer was paid for." This remark led to others. The discussion became more heated. The two finally jumped off the fence and as they did this, Ross pulled his pistol and began shooting. The first shot was at Archdeacon, but missed. Archdeacon started to run and the second shot struck him. Schlitz also started to run, and says Ross followed him up and shot him in the back. The two were close together when the shot was fired. One or two persons saw the shooting, and the facts will be more fully developed at Ross' examining trial.

Railroad Notes.

One of the colored men from Virginia, employed in the quarries near A. F. Moore's, died Monday morning from fever, and some of the others are very ill. The heat of the past few days has been very severe on these poor fellows, camping out and deprived in a great degree of the care and comfort that should be given the sick.—Vanceburg Courier.

A correspondent at Carr's P. O., Lewis County, says: "Work on the railroad is progressing finely here. The grading is done across John Stout's farm, and work is progressing on the Halbert place."

Three car-loads of stone from the quarries in Rowan County were delivered here Saturday. It will be used in the bridge across Limestone creek. The stone is the finest ever brought to this place.

The grading through Charleston Bottom will be commenced at an early day—probably this week. The force to be employed, it is said, will not be very large.

Colonel Childe was at Concord one day last week fixing up some rights of way in that locality. Work at that point is progressing favorably.

Ground has been broken for the bridge across Beasley Branch. A large quantity of stone is on hand, ready for the structure.

The surveyors are kept busy and have all they can do to get the route ready for the contractors.

MR. HARRY GILBERT, the celebrated aeronaut, was here last week, to complete arrangements for a grand balloon ascension at the Ripley Fair. The ascension will take place, Wednesday, August the 25th, and Miss Clara Lavere, of w r d wide reputation as an aerial performer, will occupy the basket.—Ripley Bee and Times.

A FARMER sold his wheat last week and forgot to pay his subscription. The editor forgot to pay the printer, the printer did not pay his board bill, the boarding-house lady, of course, could not pay the grocer. The grocer could, of course, not pay his advertising bill. If only that farmer had not forgot, what a sight of trouble could have been saved.—Exchange.

ESCLAPIA SPRINGS is booming with cheerful and well-fed guests and the ball room is not the least attractive of its many pleasant features. Col. Alf Mullins is in his glory bossing the hotel, and John Lehman is just spreading himself on the cuisine arrangements. Esculapia has the call this season and is doing the most satisfactory business of any place in the West or South and it's all owing to superior management.—Covington Commonwealth.

A Valuable Receipt.

Our readers can paste the following in their hats—such as wear hats—for future reference. It is taken from the Bourbon News and we're almost convinced it's an excellent receipt:

"Colonel Paul King, an old citizen of Harrison County, gives the following recipe for sowing turnips: Have your ground thoroughly prepared by the morning of the first Monday in August. Sow the seed on that morning before breakfast while singing any good old hymn; rake them in carefully both ways; then eat breakfast and vote the straight Democratic ticket. Mr. King says he has tried this recipe for the last forty years, and has never known it to fail in bringing forth the best results."

The half has not been told. There is but one of the old Dye family left, bachelor Frank. Mrs. Daniel Lawrence at the Laytham toll-gate is quite poorly. The mercury ran up to ninety-three in the shade last Thursday. Miss Mollie Knight, the belle of Millersburg, is visiting the family of R. E. Pogue. Some of the Mayville merchants are sending out their statements before the parties get their goods. We have had fine rains of late. Nothing but a cyclone or a hail storm can cheat us out of a good corn crop. Mrs. Mary A. Collins of Caneridge, Bourbon Co., and Miss Fannie Collins, a very attractive young lady of Harrison County, are visiting Captain A. Jackson's family. Evans Lye, an old resident of this county, who has been confined to his home for several years by affliction, fell asleep on the 29th ult. His remains were placed in our cemetery on the 30th. He had reached his eighty-six year. Dr. Vansant and J. McClinton were here again last week, seated behind a pair of sorrels, with two of Mason County's fairest maids by their side. Those dealing in two-thirty stock had better keep a sharp look out.
